Summary: A poem

Silence

Silence

>
Silence;
>I fill my silence with words
cheerful expressions >unending laughter
outpourings of happiness
>that no one understands.
In my silence is fear, in my silence is craving
>In my silence, desperation.

>Silence;
I fill my silence with more silence
>layer upon layer
deeper, deeper >until I am buried and I become the silence
>In my silence is stillness, in my silence is sadness
In my silence, hopelessness.
>
Silence;
>I fill my silence with anger
cold like frozen steel >sharp and cutting
chilling to the bone
>until I am dead
In my silence is rage, in my silence is self-loathing
>In my silence, loneliness.

>Silence;
I fill my silence with honor
>words of justice
phrases of judgement
>sitting blind on a throne with a crown of swords upon my brow

>In my silence is wrath, in my silence is mourning
In my silence,
captivity.
>
Silence;
>I fill my silence with smiles
kind words
>caring touches reaching out until >I have nothing more to give, but still I do In my silence is sympathy, in my silence is innocence
>In my silence, I alone speak.

>Five of us stand in the silence made brothers, lovers, friends by its soul destroying nothingness

>one sees with eyes clear of the death surrounding us
one speaks,
while four stand locked away
>the silence would die forever if only they could hear.
